The Powder Maker

Considering how important his work is to the public, it is fitting that more should be known about the powder maker and his job.

The characteristics which fit him for his work are as largely mental as physical, and the work itself develops his acuteness of mind—his powers of observation, judgment, and decision.

The powder worker trained in the school of the Hercules plants learns to take in all his surroundings at a glance. If he enters one of the small buildings on a dynamite or black powder line nothing escapes him. He sees instantly many things which the casual observer might gaze at for minutes without noticing.

A large part of the explosives used in the United States, and much that is used in foreign countries, is made by the men in twelve Hercules plants—four for dynamite and eight for black blasting powder.

Behind all our manufacturing industries and our railroads, behind all the useful and beautiful objects fashioned out of metals—from hob nails to scarf pins, and from steam shovels to limousines—stands the powder worker. Without the explosives he supplies—hundreds of millions of pounds annually—the miner's efforts to move the vast inert bodies of ore and coal would be as futile as the scratching of hands.

What a United States Senator wrote to his son-in-law

EVERY successful man in business feels a responsibility for the younger men with whom he is associated.

How can he help them?

Not by money. Not by influence. Help of this character defeats its own ends; it weakens rather than strengthens the man who receives it.

Many of the leaders of American business have found a way to render more effective and permanent help. They have investigated the Alexander Hamilton Institute and take advantage of every opportunity to recommend its training to their younger associates.

What the Senator wrote

SOME time ago a young business man in one of the leading southern cities enrolled for the Institute's Modern Business Course and Service.

"My father-in-law is Senator so and so from a neighboring state," he said. "The Senator wrote me from Washington only a week ago urging me to enrol with the institute.

"My wife and the Alexander Hamilton Institute are the only two blessings that the Senator has ever recommended to me in unqualified terms."

He is one of the many thousand young men who owe their business progress to the fact that some older man urged the importance of business training.

The bigger the business, the more Institute men

TWO facts stand out prominently to distinguish the Alexander Hamilton Institute from every other institution of business training.

The first is the unusual proportion of college men who have welcomed its training. Of the 110,000 men whom the Institute has enrolled in the ten years of its existence more than 35% are university graduates.

The second fact is the widespread endorsement of this training afforded by the patronage of men in the nation's largest and most influential industries.

The heads of large businesses recognize that the future of their enterprises depends upon their ability to create new executives.

The Advisory Council

BUSINESS and educational authority of the highest type are represented on the Institute's Advisory Council. That Council consists of:

Frank A. Vanderlip, the financier; General Coleman duPont, the well known business executive; John Hayes Hammond, the eminent engineer; Jeremiah W. Jenks, the statistician and economist; and Joseph French Johnson, Dean of the New York University School of Commerce.

How much is a year of your life worth?

THE Institute says to the salesman, the accountant, the superintendent or the engineer: "You must know the fundamentals of every department of business if you are to supervise those departments—selling, merchandising, advertising, costs, accounting, office and factory management, corporation finance.

To learn these by actual experience in each department will consume years of your life; here is a shorter, more direct route, based on the experience and methods of the most successful men in business."

The facts are in this book.

WHETHER you are an older man, interested in the success of your younger associates; or a young man seeking a more direct route to larger success and increased income, you should send for "Forging Ahead in Business". It is a 116 page book giving all the facts, with a complete description of the Course and Service. Send for your copy today.

The Service of an Electrical Research Laboratory

The research facilities of the General Electric Company are an asset of world-wide importance, as recent war work has so clearly demonstrated. Their advantages in pursuits of peace made them of inestimable value in time of war.

A most interesting story tells of the devices evolved which substantially aided in solving one of the most pressing problems of the war—the submarine menace. Fanciful, but no less real, were the results attained in radio communication which enabled an aviator to control a fleet of flying battleships, and made possible the sending, without a wire, history-making messages and orders to ships at sea. Scarcely less important was the X-ray tube, specially designed for field hospital use and a notable contribution to the military surgical service. And many other products, for both combatant and industrial use, did their full share in securing the victory.

In the laboratories are employed highly trained physicists, chemists, metallurgists and engineers, some of whom are experts of international reputation. These men are working not only to convert the resources of Nature to be of service to man, but to increase the usefulness of electricity in every line of endeavor. Their achievements benefit every individual wherever electricity is used.

Scientific research works hand in hand with the development of new devices, more efficient apparatus and processes of manufacture. It results in the discovery of better and more useful materials and ultimately in making happier and more livable the life of all mankind.

Some of the General Electric Company's Research Activities During the War:

Submarine detection devices
X-ray tube for medical service
Radio telephone and telegraph
Electric welding and applications
Searchlights for the Army and Navy
Electric furnaces for gun shrinkage
Magneto insulation for air service
Detonators for submarine mines
Incendiary and smoke bombs

PROVIDENCE, MARCH, 1920

NO. 8

THE NEW ALUMNI MANAGER

Captain Norman Stanley Case, Brown '08, has been chosen by the officers of the Associated Alumni of Brown University as alumni manager. His duties will be of varied character, but in general it may be said that he will do everything within his power to bring the graduates and former students of Brown into closer mutual contact and into closer relationship also with the university.

Captain Case's offices have already been established in rooms K and L at Rockefeller Hall, where he will be glad to perform any services for Brown men for which he may properly be called upon. Among these may be suggested the securing of rooms at any time in Providence for alumni living out of town. All alumni are invited without further notice to avail themselves of the facilities of his headquarters in Rockefeller Hall. These facilities include writing materials, etc. The idea in general is to make the offices a clearing house for all Brown interests. Captain Case will also make extensive trips through the United States for the purpose of establishing and coordinating alumni organizations.

That the Associated Alumni are fortunate in securing his services is suggested in the following biographical summary of the new manager:

Norman S. Case was born in Providence, the son of John Warren and Louise Maria (White) Case, Oct. 11, 1888. He attended the Providence public schools, was graduated from the Classical High School in 1904 and spent the summer of that year in travel in Europe. He received the degree of A. B. from Brown in 1908 and of LL. B. from Boston University in 1912.

While an undergraduate at Brown he was a member of Delta Upsilon; his class track team (1) (2); his class swimming team (2) (3); the 'Varsity swimming team (3) (4), and Sock and Buskin (3) (4). He was a Carpenter prize speaker (3); an associate editor of the Herald (3) (4); and a member of the membership committee of the Brown Union (3) (4) and chairman (4).

The year of 1908-09 was spent in travel in the East—China, Japan, the Philippines, etc., in company with an uncle, Rev. Thomas S. Barbour, D.

D., '74. He entered the Harvard Law School in the fall of 1909, remained there two years, and was admitted to the Rhode Island bar in 1911, to the Massachusetts bar in 1912, and later to the Federal courts. He practised law in Providence with Livingston Ham, '94, 1913-15, and with Gardner, ('77), Pirce ('92) and Thornley, ('97), 1915-16.

Having previously had a long militia service in Massachusetts and Rhode Island, he was called into the Federal service and sent to Fort Bliss, El Paso, Tex., in June, 1916, as first lieutenant of Troop A, 1st Squadron Cavalry, R. I. N. G. He was discharged in November and returned to the practice of the law with Lyman and McDonnell ('91).

Again he was called into the Federal service, this time as captain of Troop A, July 25, 1917. With that organization he was transferred to Co. A, 103d Machine Gun Battery, 26th (Yankee) Division.

He sailed for overseas Oct. 2, 1917, landing first at Liverpool and afterward (Oct. 21) at La Havre, and remained with his company till Jan. 1, 1918. He was successively judge advocate, 26th Division; assistant provost marshal, Services of Supply, and acting general staff officer, A. E. F., to July 2, 1919, sailing from Marseilles on that day and landing at New York July 17, 1919. Two days later he was honorably discharged.

Captain Case was married, June 28, 1916, to Miss Emma Louise Arnold of Bethel, Vt., and has one son, Norman S. Case, Jr., born July 8, 1917. He served as a member of the Providence City Council from the 9th Ward, 1914-18, and is a member of the University Club, Society of Mayflower Descendants, Cranston Street—Roger Williams Church, Rhode Island Historical Society, American Legion and Soldiers' Bonus Commission of Rhode Island.

OVER $1,500,000 FOR BROWN

It was announced at the dinner given by the University at the Brown Union on Feb. 13 to a large number of friends, including members of the endowment committee, members of the Corporation and prominent business men of Rhode Island, that more than one-half of the $3,000,000 set as the minimum to be raised as an addition to Brown's resources was already pledged.

The following gifts make up the amount received at the date of the dinner: Stephen O. Metcalf, $100,000; Henry D. Sharpe, $200,000; Miss Ellen D. Sharpe, $50,000; Louisa and Jesse H. Metcalf, $250,000; Mrs. Mary D. Chafee, $50,000; Mantion B. Metcalf, $100,000; Mrs. Louisa D. S. Metcalf, $35,000; William Gammell, $50,000; Samuel W. Smith, $25,000; John D. Rockefeller, Jr., $500,000; and other gifts and pledges totalling $156,155. The gift of $250,000 from Louisa and Jesse H. Metcalf was specifically given towards the building and equipment of a new chemical laboratory.

Three men prominent in Rhode Island industry, James R. MacColl, George H. Holmes and William L. Sweet, were the speakers of the evening. Henry D. Sharpe, '94, chairman of the movement, presided, and President Faunce introduced the speakers.

Mr. MacColl had as his general subject the obligations of the colleges and universities to the country, especially in relation to business and the courses of general instruction that will fit men to meet these obligations.

He declared: "Under the existing circumstances, it is natural that colleges and universities should endeavor to ascertain anew what their obligations are to their country, and also to business—using the word in the largest and broadest sense. The aim and purpose of every university must be to turn out cultured, well-educated graduates, men with faith and vision who love work and service and are eager to take a hand in the activities and problems of life—in relation to business, successful and progressive, not mere money-makers, sympathetic with the worthy aspirations of the masses of the people, public-spirited citizens, patriots—not politicians."

Mr. Holmes discussed the subject: "Brown University as an instrument in the educational equipment of the State, and the ways in which it may meet more fully the industrial requirements of Rhode Island and contiguous territory."

Mr. Sweet took as his topic: "The service rendered by science. Its effect upon our general welfare. The results that follow its encouragement."

The dinner was well-attended and enthusiastic. Since it was held work on the endowment movement has gone steadily forward and considerable additional pledges have been received. No doubt is felt of the entire success of the fund under the combined direction of Chairman Sharpe and Associate Chairman Bumpus.

MIDWINTER REUNIONS

THE DINNER AT BOSTON

The 47th annual Sons of Brown reunion at Boston, on Feb. 3, was held at the City Club. About 250 were in attendance and the occasion was thoroughly enjoyable.

Officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows: President—Arthur W. Pinkham, '02; Vice Presidents—William Blodget, '71, Fred H. Williams, '77, Appleton P. Williams, '89, Leonard W. Cronkhite, '05; Executive Committee—Harry K. Metcalf, '02, George B. Bullock, '05, William P. Burnham, '07, G. Denny Moore, '10; F. Hartwell Greene, '15; Secretary—Homer N. Sweet, '07; Treasurer—William T. Pearson, '06; Delegates to Advisory Council (appointed by president)—Fred T. Field, '00, George B. Bullock, '05.

At the head of the tables sat Governor Beeckman of Rhode Island, President Faunce, Dr. W. W. Keen, '59, Dr. Hermon C. Bumpus, '84, Professor Dallas Lore Sharpe, '95, President-elect Arthur W. Pinkham, '02, Charles R. Adams, '84, Andrew J. Jennings, '72, Edmund Wood, '76, Charles W. Towne, '97.

President Faunce spoke of the threatening decrease in public school teachers, and explained the endowment and development fund.

Governor Beeckman, in an address in which he pledged $5,000 to the fund in a dual capacity as "dean of New England Governors and friend of Brown," urged the essential justice of increased salaries for educators. He said his intimacy with Brown began when students stole ice cream from his doorstep and left this note: "We like your looks, so we left you one can, otherwise we would have taken all four." The Governor praised the relations existing between the State and University as being exceptionally close.

Dr. W. W. Keen, '59, of Philadelphia, the oldest Brown alumnus in active service during the recent war, warned in strong terms against the possible annihilation of the teaching profession.

"The educational situation is one of the most serious crises in the history of this country," declared Dr. Keen. "Are our children going to lack teachers simply because the latter could not get their living out of teaching?"

Other speakers were Charles W. Towne, '97, who asked for "more Brown and less Bolshevism," and Arthur W. Pinkham, '02. President Hermon Cary Bumpus, '84, presided as toastmaster. The old Brown songs were sung with the old college zest, when Towne and John B. Archer led the way. Things started with a rush when a real "Brown" jazz orchestra let loose a lot of melody.

But the real power which put the college songs across was the delegation of 12 from the University Glee Club of Providence, led by John B. Archer. His cohorts included H. G. Clarke, Earl P. Perkins, C. P. Sisson, A. E. Corp, B. P. Raymond, E. C. Bixby, J. H. Cady, R. W. Dexter, F. O. Clapp and R. D. Kettner.

"Shall Brown Go Marching On?" was the biggest song hit of the evening. It started out: "Our eyes have gazed in wonder at the unrewarded Prof., His output's getting bigger, but his income's falling off—" and likewise, "His brow is altitudinous and filled with matter gray, The only thing that's-shameful is the matter of his Pay."

Arthur W. Pinkham, '02, as President-elect, emphasized the importance of a liberal education to the modern business man. He asked that alumni scattered throughout New England get in touch with Brown and the high schools.

Capt. John D. Edgell, '64, who had attended 45 of the 46 annual reunions, was sent the heartiest greetings of the sons of Brown, in appreciation of his "unsurpassed" record of attendance. He was unable to be present through illness. William J. Batt, '55, was present.

NEW YORK ALUMNI

The fifty-second annual reunion and dinner of the Brown alumni in New York and vicinity was held with about 100 present at the Hotel Astor, Broadway and 44th street, on the evening of Thursday, Feb. 5, a blizzard causing the small attendance. The speakers were President Faunce, Charles E. Hughes, '81, Joseph Bucklin Bishop, '70, who is editing the letters of Theodore Roosevelt, and Dr. H. C. Bumpus, '84.

President Faunce, who with Dr. Bumpus, did not arrive till 10 o'clock, spoke in his usual optimistic vein. Dr. Bumpus told of the endowment fund. Mr. Hughes gave a forceful and illuminating talk on the need of maintaining the teaching profession. Mr. Bishop's reminiscent address was delightful. A. B. Meacham was toastmaster.

DR. FAUNCE EN TOUR

During the mid-year recess, President Faunce made a tour through the Middle West to meet Brown alumni gathered at reunions and dinners in the more important cities. He met the alumni of Western Pennsylvania at luncheon in Pittsburgh, addressed the City Club of Milwaukee, and attended a meeting of the Chicago alumni. An alumni luncheon was held in Detroit and the President's tour ended with his attendance at the alumni dinner in Boston.

SPRINGFIELD ALUMNI

On Feb. 18 the annual dinner of the Brown Alumni Association of Western Massachusetts occurred at the Bridgway Hotel in Springfield. Dr. Faunce was the principal speaker. There was a rather small attendance—about 25.

The other speakers were: Rev. Dr. Phillip S. Moxom, Rev. H. E. Thayer, F. P. Cobb, A. G. Gaylord and William C. Giles. At the election of officers preceding the dinner, the following were chosen: President—William C. Giles of Springfield; vice president—C. H. Hobson of Palmer; secretary and treasurer—H. F. Os-teyee of West Springfield; executive committee—Rev. H. E. Thayer of Springfield, F. P. Cobb of Chicopee and T. H. Kenworthy of Springfield.

REUNION OF BROWN ENGINEERS

On January 23, 1920, an enthusiastic crowd of Brown engineers gathered at the Hotel Bristol, New York city, for their seventh annual dinner.

After enjoying the fine repast which the committee had provided, Professor A. E. Watson, acting as master of ceremonies, called upon a number of those present to report on their activities as Brown men, both inside the college and in practical outside work. Among those to speak were Professor W. H. Kenerson, Professor Sydney Wilmot and A. C. Chick, all of the engineering faculty, Richard Lamb, H. P. Quick, Frank E. Winsor, W. E. Farnham and George W. Davis.

Following these talks the toastmaster called upon those present to give a brief account of themselves and their work. After a general informal social discussion the gathering broke up at a late hour.

VOTE ON THE TREATY

In a secret ballot taken by the undergraduates at Brown University on the League of Nations and the Peace Treaty, only 97 students out of 742 men voted in favor of ratification of the League and treaty without amendment or reservations. A great majority of the undergraduates favored various reservations and compromises. Six propositions were submitted to the voters with the following results:

Proposition I. I favor the ratification of the League and Treaty, without amendment or reservations. 97 votes.

Proposition II. I am opposed to the ratification of the League and the Treaty in any form. 32 votes.

Proposition III. I am in favor of the ratification of the Treaty and the League, but only with the specific reservations as voted by the majority of the Senate. 86 votes.

For the success of this reunion great credit is due to Harry D. Winsor, '09, who was in charge of the local arrangements.

The following men were present: Richard Lamb, '84, H. P. Quick, '87, A. E. Watson, '88, Frank E. Winsor, '91, W. H. Kenerson, '96, W. E. Farnham, '99, Robert Forster, '03, H. S. Harding, '05, D. C. Eggleston, '05, S. R. Bellows, '07, G. W. Davis, '07, James Wilmot, '08, Sydney Wilmot, '09, Harry D. Winsor, '09, F. A. Wightman, '09, W. G. Harrington, '11, C. M. Franklin, '11, F. W. Seagrave, '12, K. S. Bell, '12, H. A. Hennessey, '12, F. P. Davis, '13, H. F. Parker, '13, G. M. White, '17, A. C. Chick, '19.

BROWN DINNER AT ALBANY

The Brown University Alumni of Albany, N. Y., and vicinity held their annual dinner at the University Club, Albany, on the night of February 4. Albert O. Foster, '97, presided, and the speakers were Rev. E. W. Babcock, '74, Harry W. Hastings, '04, Harry E. Pratt, principal of the Albany High School, who received his master's degree from Brown in 1903, and Thomas B. Appleget, '17, executive secretary. Sixteen Brown men attended. Officers were elected as follows: President, Harry W. Hastings, '04; vice president, Rev. J. J. Beckwith, '04; secretary-treasurer, Preston H. Porcheron, '02; executive committee, Arthur G. Host, '98, Russell Hathaway, Jr., '97, and Morton C. Stewart, '94.

CINCINNATI ALUMNI

The recently elected officers of the Cincinnati, Ohio, Brown Alumni Association are:

President, John Davis Sage, '99; secretary, Thomas Michael Conroy, '19; treasurer, Walter Dabney Phillips, '97.

Proposition IV. I favor any compromise on the reservations which will make possible immediate ratification of the Treaty and the League. 100 votes.

Proposition V. I favor the Government proceeding to make peace with Germany at once and leaving the question of a League of Nations to be settled afterwards. 110 votes.

Proposition VI. I favor a compromise on the reservations of such a character as will avoid the danger of defeating ratification while still making clear that America can only be involved in war by a declaration of Congress, that domestic questions and the Monroe Doctrine are entirely outside of the jurisdiction of the League, that plural votes of any member are all disqualified in the event of a dispute wherein we are disqualified from voting, and that on deciding to withdraw we are to be the judge of whether our obligations have been met. 317 votes.

IN HONOR OF TWENTY YEARS' SERVICE

We have lately been reminded that the Monthly failed to print, last fall, any adequate account of the meeting at the Providence Art Club, Oct. 15, at which the Faculty and Corporation presented President Faunce with a Vacheron and Constantin gold watch of the latest and finest model, suitably engraved, in honor of the completion of 20 years service as head of the University. Dr. Faunce assumed the presidency on Oct. 17, 1899.

In presenting the watch, Dean Randall said, in part:

"It is characteristic of a great man who is rendering valuable service to his fellow men to be unconscious of his real worth and oblivious of the time which he has spent in service. He is not looking for rewards. He does not expect recognition and appreciation. His reward is with him in the consciousness that he is making good use of the talents given to him in the service of humanity. But the fact that those who render us service are forgetful of their own value and the nature of the service which they are rendering does not excuse us from showing our appreciation of the work which they may be doing.

"Mr. President, on account of the nearness of our offices in the Administration Building, and on account of our common interest in University problems, we have been thrown for a number of years into very close relationship. We have spent many hours together in considering very perplexing problems, and we have shared the sorrows and the joys of the work which has been ours to do.

"For this reason it gives me great pleasure to have this opportunity to speak for members of the Corporation, the Administrative Officers, and my colleagues on the Faculty, in an attempt to show in some way our appreciation of the great service which you have rendered to this University, the community, and the college world during the past twenty years.

"Let us run back for a little while to the period in the history of our college twenty years ago. When you were asked to take the helm of the old college, the weather conditions were not altogether satisfactory nor as promising as a cautious mariner might desire. There was not absolute unanimity of opinion on the part of the friends of the University as to what the future policy should be. You were called upon to succeed a man who had won his way into the hearts of hundreds of loyal supporters of Brown University. There were few men who at that time dared to undertake the task, but when you received the call and you were sure that it was your duty to come to the rescue, you were not afraid. You did not count the cost, the sacrifices, or the risk, and it was no small risk which you took, for you had spent many years in preparation for one of the noblest professions open to men, and you had deservedly won a position which opened tremendous opportunities for service. You knew that if you gave up the position which you occupied and assumed the new duties here that you were surrendering for all time the opportunities which had been yours—that unless you could meet successfully the requirements of the new position a cloud would be thrown over your future. But that did not make you afraid. You came, and bravely undertook the task, and how well you have done the work we all know!

"It is impossible for us to make any satisfactory return for the service which you have rendered. Rewards for such service are not measured out in material values, but they come in the plaudit, 'Well done, good and faithful servant.' We want, however, to place in your hands some token of our esteem, some expression of our appreciation for all you have done during these years for the good old college. We have selected a little article which is a common gift, but which of its kind is as nearly perfect as we could secure. It is intended to mark time. It will remind you when the next decade comes around and you are entitled to another anniversary celebration. It will tell you that there are but twenty-four hours in a day, and that a few of those hours should be taken for relaxation. It will tell you that your office hours are from twelve to one, and not from four A. M. until chapel, and from seven in the evening until twelve at midnight. It is very accurate in its movement, and you can depend upon it as implicitly as you can upon our loyalty, our cooperation, and our support. It will tell you tomorrow and in the days to come the exact minute in which the sun passes the meridian, but may it be many years before it will mark the time when you will have passed the meridian of your service."

WOMEN'S COLLEGE NEWS AND VIEWS

Alumnae Association Activities

At the Christmas meeting of the Alumnae Association on December 27, 1919, the following resolutions were adopted:

Whereas: The Alumnae Association of Brown University recognizes the pressing needs of the University for an endowment fund to provide adequate compensation for the teaching staff and others in the employ of the University, and

Whereas: It is the duty and pleasure of the Alumnae Association to further the interests of the University in every way possible, therefore

Be it resolved, that the Alumnae Association of Brown University hereby places its services at the disposal of the President and the Corporation of Brown University for the raising of such an endowment fund.

Alumnae Musical

An alumnae musical will be held in Pembroke Hall, March 22, at 7.45 P. M. Miss Evangeline Larry is in charge of the program.

Undergraduate Notes

A branch society of the Intercollegiate Menorah Association has been established at the Women's College for the study of Jewish history and ideals. The society is open to all students and will hold frequent meetings for discussion. The officers are as follows: Sarah Crovitz, president; Celia Kaufman, secretary; Mollie Rubenstein, treasurer; Fannie Smith and Grace Shein, members of the executive committee.

On the afternoon of February 11 a basketball game was played in Sayles Gymnasium between the Class of 1923 and the Lincoln School. The Freshmen of the Women's College won with a score of 20 to 10. After the game refreshments were served to the visiting team.

There have been two parties at the dormitories this month. On the evening of February 7 the annual Miller Hall dance was held. The guests were received by Mrs. Marietta B. Haskell and Miss Mary W.

Cushman, student house president.

The students living at Metcalf Hall entertained the students living at Miller Hall at a party on Valentine's eve. Dancing, games and "stunts" were enjoyed by the girls, who came to the party dressed as little children.

THE ATHLETIC BULLETIN

Football Next Fall

The plan to end the football season next fall with the Dartmouth contest is the result of considerable criticism during last fall of the so-called anticlimax game with Columbia at New York, after playing Dartmouth at Boston. The game was arranged as a feature for the New York alumni but was not a success, and this year arrangements were made to end the season with the most important game.

It had been expected that the team would have to travel to Syracuse for a game with the Orange, as a two-year contract called for that game. However, Syracuse was prevailed upon to call off the contract, which simplified the Brunonian schedule. If the Syracuse game had been played, the schedule would have been practically as difficult as during the past season.

The season opens with the usual game with Rhode Island State College, being followed by Amherst, which is similar to the schedules of three and four years ago. The University of Maine is to be brought to Providence on Oct. 9, being booked as an attraction because that college won the State of Maine championship last fall, defeating Bowdoin, which held Brown to a 7 to 0 score. Brown has its pre-war positions on the schedules of Yale and Harvard, playing the latter team the week before the Harvard-Yale game. In 1916, when Brown played these colleges on successive Saturdays, it won both games.

The reason that only one big game has been scheduled at home is because of inadequate seating accommodations at Andrews Field. The largest crowd that ever attended a game here was in 1916, when Brown played Colgate on Thanksgiving Day in a pouring rain. Extra stands were erected to aid in the accommodation of the 8000 spectators. In order to alleviate this difficulty, arrangements were made in the early winter of 1916-1917 to raise enough money for a suitable stadium for all Brown athletics, but the war postponed the plan and nothing has been done since that time.

Brown had an easy victory over Worcester Tech in a relay race at the American Legion meet in Boston, Feb. 23. The Brown runners were Cuddeback, W. C. Forstall, S. Forstall and E. M. Murphy.

Yale's wrestlers won a hollow victory over the Brown team at the Lyman Gymnasium, Feb. 24, 31-0. The score tells the story.

The Brown Rifle Club held its first meeting of the new year in the smoking room of the Brown Union, Jan. 9. H. G. Hood, '20, is president. About 25 members were in attendance and Dr. Faunce and Professor C. W. Brown gave short talks.

A MEDAL FROM FRANCE

President Faunce has received a bronze medal struck off by the University of Paris, France, in commemoration of the service rendered by teachers and students in the allied universities in the war, and as a token of friendly allegiance between the educators of France and the United States.

The medal, which is four inches in diameter, shows, on one side, a bas relief of a courtyard in the University of Paris, and, on the other, a representation of science, a female figure bearing a book in one hand and a sword in the other. The letter of bestowal, which accompanied the medal, is signed by M. Poincare, President of France, and Vice Rector of the University of Paris. The letter reads:

"The University of Paris has caused to be struck off in memory of the war a medal which represents science in the service of right, and which recalls the services rendered by her teachers and students, not only on the field of battle but in the quietness of the study or of the laboratory. It is particularly agreeable to her to have thus the occasion to thank Brown University for the brilliant part which her professors and students have taken in the common victory. She urges you to be kind enough to consider this medal as a testimony of their fraternal friendship."

BROWN UNIVERSITY

Of old she sat uplift, alone,
Afar from mart and street,
Broad grassy fields around her spread,
The village at her feet.

The sons of men climbed up the height,
And donned the scholar's gown;
Drank of the Past from out her cup,
Then to their toil went down.

Now at her gates the city's tides
Incessant throb and thrill;
A thousand homes press close around,
Cars pierce her tunnelled hill.

The sons of men throng to her halls,
And seek the varied lore

Of Past and Present, Science, Art,
An ever-growing store.
Yet still she sits uplift, alone,
And hath a green retreat,
Where old elms whisper round her walls
And lure from mart and street.

Amidst the hum and shock of men,
The lust for power and gold,
She fills the soul with finer things,
As in the days of old.

God grant that in the days to come,
When all now quick are dust,
She so may teach her future sons,
True to her ancient trust.

FOR BROWN IN CHINA

The Brown students who went to the great Volunteer Convention at Des Moines, Iowa, have had two meetings of the entire delegation—eleven men and three women from Pembroke—since their return. They have also taken charge of one chapel service and have written a number of articles in the Brown Daily Herald.

These students have taken for their particular task the advocacy of the plan for a "Brown in China," making the centre of the movement Professor Daniel H. Kulp, Brown, 1913, who is already a professor of sociology at Shanghai College. Brown undergraduates formerly supported a missionary in Burma, the late Dr. J. H. Randall, but since his return there has been no district missionary work conducted by the University. It is now proposed to ask both alumni and undergraduates to stand behind the remarkable work that has been started by Professor Kulp. In addition to the courses in sociology which Mr. Kulp has established, he has organized a social settlement among the factory operatives in a great manufacturing region near the college. This settlement already has a budget of $13,000 a year and is entirely self-supporting.

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE ADVISORY BOARD

The annual meeting of the Advisory Board of the Associated Alumni was held at the University Club, Providence, on the evening of March 2nd, preceded by a dinner at the club, at which twenty-five members were present.

E. O. Stanley, '76, was re-elected chairman, and C. A. Collins, Jr., '08, was re-elected secretary of the board for the ensuing year. President Faunce spoke briefly in regard to the occasion for the meeting and the reorganization of the Association and outlined some matters which he believed called for the attention and assistance of the alumni. Dr. Bumpus also told of the progress of the endowment and development fund and outlined ways in which the individual alumni could be of assistance in the raising of the sum desired.

The Chairman announced that in accordance with the by-laws he had appointed a committee on committees, and read their nominations for the standing committees of the association, and they were elected. The Executive Committee reported, through its officers, that the Associated Alumni had now 1132 due-paying members, that offices had been obtained in the Brown Union and that Captain Norman S. Case, '08, had been secured as alumni manager, that the offices were open and that Captain Case was there to serve and be of assistance to the alumni in any way within his power. Further, the University has transferred to the care and keeping of the Association the alumni records, and active contact has been established with alumni in all parts of the country, and the Association in its new form is fully under way.

Various matters were taken up for discussion. Nominations were made for the Congregational and Episcopal vacancies now existing, and the names of those nominated will be published later upon assurance from the gentlemen named that they will be candidates.

Among the interesting topics discussed were: the Musical Club trips and guarantees, and also the question of the time and place of meeting, of an Alumni Day separate and apart from the Commencement activities, of proper advertisement of the college, of the specific duties of the alumni manager, of the re-organization of the alumni clubs throughout the country, and of how the alumni might best be of assistance in co-operating with the committee charged with the raising of the endowment and development fund.

The next morning the board met in Rockefeller Hall, at the offices of the Associated Alumni, and disposed of the reports of committees, listened to the report of the Loyalty Fund, given by T. P. Appleget, '17, and completed its programme of business. The meeting then adjourned and the members of the board attended the various exercises of Visiting Day.

THE ADVISORY BOARD

One cannot attend the annual sessions of the Advisory Board of the Associated Alumni without being convinced of the desirability of electing members of this useful body for more than one year.

There are a considerable number of members who have now attended so many of the meetings that they possess a special and invaluable knowledge of the problems to be treated. They are veteran legislators whom we should make every effort to retain indefinitely upon the board.

As an offset to the possible danger of getting the board into ruts through the long continued service of members, the Alumni Monthly would be glad to see every alumni association, large and small, entitled to at least two members, one of whom should be a newcomer on the board. In this way the efficiency of the board would or should register at nearly one hundred per cent.

No fear need be felt of making the Advisory Board numerically unwieldy. Personally we should like to see an annual attendance of fifty instead of twenty-five or thirty. It would do the college good—and the members of the board good, too.

THE ENDOWMENT FUND

The endowment and development fund is more than half way to the three-million minimum.

We know that we echo the sincere and hearty feelings of every friend of Brown when we express thus publicly our deep gratitude to the generous men and women whose names were announced on the list of donors at the dinner in the Brown Union on February thirteenth.

Their liberal gifts will bear fruit in the quickening of innumerable human minds and spirits in the far years to come.

Hon. Elon Rouse Brown, for many years Republican leader of the New York State Senate, has been assisting the judiciary committee of the New York State Assembly as one of the counsel presenting the case against the five suspended Socialist Assemblymen.

Edward Davis Jones, one of the founders of the Wall Street Journal, died Feb. 16, 1920, at his home, 16 West Sixty-eighth st., New York, of hemorrhage of the brain. Apparently in the best of health Mr. Jones suffered a fainting spell on the preceding evening. He rallied quickly, however, and nothing more was thought of the illness until the next morning, when Mrs. Jones was awakened by her husband gasping for breath. He died before a physician could arrive. Mr. Jones was born in Worcester, Mass., October 7, 1856, graduated from Worcester Academy and entered Brown University with the class of 1878. After three years at college he took a position with the Providence Journal as dramatic critic, and later became part owner of the Providence Dispatch. He sold out his interest in that newspaper in 1881 and went to New York to found with Charles H. Dow, another New Englander, the financial news concern of Dow, Jones & Co. From his introduction to the financial district and during his association with Mr. Dow he fought for publicity of the financial statements of large corporations. His financial bulletins grew in the course of time to be the founding of the Wall Street Journal. Mr. Jones was attracted to James R. Keene at the time the latter was enjoying his heyday in Wall street; then later, after severing his connection with Dow, Jones & Co., he became associated with John H. Davis & Co. as financial advisor and statistician. He had recently served in a similar capacity with Tate & Hays. During the last five years Mr. Jones conducted a financial column in the Daily News Record, in which his quick analysis and keen insight into financial affairs served a wide circle. He was an authority on railroad financing, had travelled widely and knew many prominent railroad men. He also was an intimate friend of the late Cyrus Townsend Brady, with whom he had planned to spend his declining years as a near neighbor. Mr. Brady's recent death is known to have been a great shock to him. Mr. Jones is survived by his wife and one son. He was a brother of Preston D. Jones, '69, and an uncle of J. D. E. Jones, '93, Frederick W. Jones, '96, and Preston D. Jones, '07.

Edward F. Ely died at his home, 36 Prospect street, opposite the college campus, on Sunday morning, Feb. 8, 1920, of pneumonia. He was born in this city Feb. 12, 1858. He came of sturdy New England stock on both sides. He was a son of Dr. James Witchell Coleman Ely, '42, and Susan (Backus) Ely. Dr. Ely was a native of Windsor, Vt., and was a graduate not only of Brown but of the Harvard Medical School. He began practice in Providence and soon became recognized as one of the prominent physicians of the city. His eldest son, Joseph Cady Ely, '70, was for years a prominent attorney in this city, having been admitted to the Rhode Island bar in 1872. Edward F. Ely was graduated from Brown in 1879 and from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 1882. He began the study of architecture in the office of Stone & Carpenter in this city. In 1882-3 he was assistant in the department of applied mechanics and 1883-5 instructor in architecture at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Until 1888 he was in the employ of well-known Boston architects. During that year he removed to New York city, where he remained until 1895, when he located in Providence, becoming a member of the firm of Hoppin & Ely, from which he withdrew in 1907. Since then he had not been in active practice.

In 1907 he was elected chairman of the Board of Park Commissioners, an office which he held continuously until the time of his death. He was ex-officio a member of the Metropolitan Park Commission and was for some time its chairman. Last year, when the original Metropolitan Park Commission was abolished and a new body organized under the same name, Mr. Ely was retained on the board because of his exceptional knowledge of public parks. He also served on the City Board of Recreation, becoming a member because of his office as chairman of the Board of Park Commissioners. In 1904, Mr. Ely was elected president of the Rhode Island Chapter, American Institute of Architects. He was identified with many societies and clubs, among them the Hope, Providence Art and Agawam Hunt Clubs and the Squantum Association. He was a member of the University Club of New York and the Technology Club of Boston. The only immediate surviving relatives of Mr. Ely are his sister-in-law, Mrs. Joseph C. Ely, and a niece, Miss Ruth Ely, of 94 Waterman street.

The Providence Tribune, of which F. N. Luther, '84, is editor, said on Feb. 13: "Writing about Lincoln yesterday a New York paper aptly quoted a line of Sam Walter Foss's poetry, 'Bring me men to match my mountains.'" The line, Brown University men of Mr. Foss's time will recall, is from his Class Day poem, read in June, 1882, in Sayles Hall. Only one other Brown Class Day poem has now any place at all in lasting literature, John Hay's in 1858, a single passage in which is sometimes quoted. The paucity of this record is, however, not unnatural. American college boys of scarcely more than two score years are not expected to write poetry that long outlives its first summer even in the memory of friends; and few, if any, colleges have as good a record as Brown in this respect—or, to consider another class of genius, in the production of professional baseball players, of whom she has graduated far more than she has of poets."

1885

Arthur P. Sumner, speaker of the Rhode Island House of Representatives, has been elected a judge of the Superior Court of the State. He was born in Providence on April 8, 1862, and received his elementary education in the Providence schools. He was graduated from Brown University with a degree of A. B. in the class of 1885. Upon leaving college he took up the study of law in the office of Edwin Metcalf and Walter F. Angell, '80, in this city. He was admitted to the Rhode Island Bar in 1888 and has practiced law since that time. In connection with his practice he was standing master in chancery and register in insolvency for Providence county. Mr. Sumner was first elected as a member of the House from the Second Representative District of Providence in January, 1912, and has served continuously since that time. He was on the judiciary committee and part of the time its chairman, up to January, last year, when he was elected speaker of the House. Judge-elect Sumner is a member of the Rhode Island Bar Association, the University Club, the A. E. Club and the Rhode Island Historical Society, and was, last year, president of the Rhode Island Sons of the American Revolution.

Colonel H. Anthony Dyer of Providence is a public speaker of equal vigor and grace. Of one of his recent talks, the Civic League Bulletin of Newport says: Those who were present at the Art Association's New Year's reception on January first enjoyed a most delightful talk by Colonel Anthony Dyer, on "Some Picturesque Corners of Rhode Island." Colonel Dyer, who is no stranger to the Art Association, has the gift of making his audience see, as he does, the charm and dignity of old New England homesteads, so tucked away in remote nooks of an unfrequented part of the country as altogether to have escaped the changes which modern times bring.

The old South County, beloved of writer and artist, contains many such, and here Colonel Dyer has spent long days, lovingly transcribing the gracious lines of old gambrel roofs, unchanged since the "Good old colony times, when we lived under the King;" or attempting to reproduce the colors of an ancient door, painted red seventy-five years ago and white fifty years ago and perhaps one or two other shades in between. Colonel Dyer drew an amusing picture of his incursions into unfamiliar dooryards, armed with a package of sweets for the lady of the house, or smoking material for the men; for, as he says, he does not like to intrude himself, where his presence may interfere with the "chores," without some small offering. "The dog doesn't like it, and the cat doesn't like it, and I'm not sure the owner always likes it." He told of one of these old farmers coming to watch him "mark it out," and of how the unfamiliar things gained a new value in his eyes, as the artist showed him how the history of a century of wind and weather was all recorded in his ancient dwelling. It is much to be regretted that a too appreciative public has snapped up all the sketches of old Narragansett scenes that Colonel Dyer had planned to show. However, I think his Art Association audience feel as if they had seen them—so thoroughly were they transferred in fancy to the county that he describes. The sagging old roofs, the picturesque grouping of farm buildings, the masses of blush roses covering ancient porches—we could see them all.

Edward Armington Sammis died at his home in Stamford, Conn., Nov. 28, 1919, after an illness of two months. He was born in Providence in 1872, and was graduated from Brown in 1895 with the degree of Ph.B. Almost immediately after graduation, he taught in what was then the Johnston High School, now merged with the Providence High School. After a service of one year in the Johnston school, Mr. Sammis went to Stamford, in September, 1896, and began the work of developing the commercial department of the high school. During the summer of 1897, he attended the Rochester Business Institute, and he was at the Phonographic Institute in Cincinnati during the summer of 1898. The latter institution awarded him a certificate as an advanced teacher of phonography. In the year 1902, Mr. Sammis was appointed vice-principal of the high school, a position which he held until his death. Mr. Sammis was a pioneer in the work of commercial high schools, and his advice was frequently sought by experts in his own and other States. As soon as Mr. Sammis went to Stamford, he became identified with St. John's Church. For sixteen years he was assistant treasurer, and during the year before his death he served as treasurer of the church. He was also a member of the vestry. Mr. Sammis was active in Masonry, being a member of the Blue Lodge, Royal Arch Chapter, Council and Knight Templar Commandery. For many years he was an active member of the Stamford Teachers' Association, having served as its president and as secretary. He was at one time president of the Fairfield County Teachers' Round Table. He leaves a widow and two children. Out of respect to the memory of Mr. Sammis, the high school was closed on the day of his funeral by order of the school committee. The Stamford Daily Advocate says: "Mr. Sammis filled so large a sphere of usefulness that his death must be regarded as a serious loss to the whole community. He was known to most people as vice-principal of the high school and head of the commercial department, which, under his direction, was advanced to a state of efficiency that gave it a superior standing in the educational world. Mr. Sammis took his work as an educator seriously. Always a student, deeply interested in everything that pertained to the schools, he was noted especially for the painstaking manner in which he treated every detail of whatever work he undertook, whether in the school or elsewhere. He believed in accuracy and order in everything, and his example has been an inspiration to all who were brought in contact with him. As a teacher he was thorough and conscientious. His character no less than his ability made a deep impression upon his pupils and his friends. When he entered upon the vocation of a teacher, he determined to make it the work of his life, and he brought to it the training, enthusiasm and earnestness that made it effective. Every good undertaking in the high school had his cordial support, and he will be remembered as one who was always willing to work, to do more than could fairly be considered his share. He had the esteem of every one of the teachers and students in the school. Many of the latter were placed in positions through his influence. A recommendation from Mr. Sammis was always valued. It was known that he could not be swerved from the truth. As principal of the public evening school for several years, he rendered service of great value. The manner in which the accounts of St. John's parish were kept, and especially the care and completeness shown in preparation of the annual reports, received recognition from the diocese. Some of his annual reports were exhibited at diocesan conventions, as a specimen of what might be done by a parish treasurer. But it would be difficult to find a man who, however willing he might be, could put an annual report in such form as those of Mr. Sammis, whose typewritten pages, neatly bound, would at once win the admiration of any one capable of appreciating neat and artistic work. . . . Mr. Sammis was a sincere man. There was no hypocrisy in his religion; there was no sham in his life. He was kind, considerate and charitable. He set a splendid example as an industrious worker. He was devoted to his family, true to his friends, loyal to his school, faithful to every trust committed to him."

The Union College Alumni Monthly says: Dr. Stewart A. McComber (Brown '96), lately professor of physiology and director of physical training at Union College, died of cerebrospinal meningitis at Neuilly, France, on Wednesday, November 5, 1919. He was taken ill the Saturday preceding. Dr. McComber resigned his professorship at Union at the end of the college year, 1917-1918, to enter the war service of the Young Men's Christian Association. He was assigned to service in France, where he was one of the eight directors appointed to conduct schools for the training of French schoolmasters in American sports, which the French Department of War desired to have introduced. He was put in charge of the large school at Montpellier, where his direction was so brilliantly successful that he was appointed to succeed Mr. Carpenter as head director of all the work when Mr. Carpenter returned to America. Dr. McComber thus became the guiding spirit of the great movement, now national and under the patronage of the French government, for the development of a rational plan of training in hygiene and physical education in France. After the armistice the work which the Americans of the Young Men's Christian Association had begun and had carried so far forward was reorganized as the Société des Foyers de l'Union Franco-Américaine under French officers; but Dr. McComber as Directeur Adjoint de Sports was still the guiding spirit. He was busily engaged in all parts of France in organizing exercises, games and sports among children, soldiers and sailors and in planning the training of French athletes to compete at the Olympic games in Antwerp in August, 1920. A part of his work on which he bestowed special care and affection was the restoration of the children of devastated France to health and vigor. When Dr. McComber took up his work in France he received a great inspiration in a great opportunity, and he responded with alertness and ability and in the spirit of the Master in whose name he served. He became a principal author of an influence which seems destined to be permanent and formative in the French nation. Many children, and their elders, in France are now remembering him as their beloved friend and benefactor. When Dr. McComber came to Union College in 1906 to be director of physical training his field was a promise. There was no material equipment worth speaking of, but he brought his real equipment in his own expertness as an athlete, his skill in his chosen profession and his manly character. He had a proper sense of the importance of physical training and of good habits, and he taught accordingly both by precept and example. He trained excellent athletes and he inculcated the highest ideals of sportsmanship. The value of his work was recognized when he was promoted to be professor of physiology and director of physical training in 1908. The memorial to him at Union College is the excellent adaptation of the new Alumni Gymnasium to its athletic and social purposes. The plans for the gymnasium were the result of his careful investigation and thought. Dr. McComber was graduated bachelor of philosophy in 1896 from Brown University, where he was rated as Brown's best athlete. He received the degree of master of arts from Brown University in 1897. During the summers of 1896 and 1897 he studied at the Harvard Summer School of Physical Training. In 1897 he was gymnasium instructor at Brown University. From 1899 to 1906 he was director of physical training at the Detroit University School and during his service there he studied at the Detroit College of Medicine, from which he was graduated doctor of medicine in 1903. Dr. McComber leaves a wife and mother.
